3 Associated Procedures for

Ara Ltd Corporate Policy on: Raising a Problem or Complaint

Contents:	3.1	Raising a Problem or Complaint
	3.2	Appeals

3.1 Raising a Problem or Complaint

- a) Learners and members of the public are able to raise problems or make complaints about Ara Ltd courses/programmes, employees, other learners or administrative systems or decisions, either informally, via written notification or according to procedures set out (CPP117c) and in specific associated policies.
- b) The most appropriate procedure for raising a problem or complaint should be used in the first instance (See CPP117c for support). This includes a direct approach to the person most directly involved and/or the manager responsible for the area of concern, with reference to the relevant policy.
- c) Learner problems and complaints should be raised as soon as practicable. Any staff member approached by a learner with a problem or complaint will take action by either resolving the problem or referring the learner to the most suitable person to address the concern or complaint (as per CPP117c). Confidentiality will be applied to all matters with regards to concerns and complaints. If the complainant feels unable to go directly to those involved, they will be supported and guided through the complaints process. A complaint can be submitted via a “Notification of Problem or Complaint” form (CPP117a) online link, or by printing and completing the form and sending this to complaints@ara.ac.nz
- d) The information provided via the Notification form (CPP117a) is used as the basis for Ara Ltd to determine the most appropriate procedure to follow in the specific case. Please see section 8 (CPP117c) for the outline of the procedures and timelines.
